Welcome to the Innovation and Strategy Reading Group!

The Innovation and Strategy Reading Group (ISRG) is an open platform in which we (mainly junior researchers such as PhD students and Postdocs) discuss classic and/or new research papers in the field of innovation, entrepreneurship and strategy. More recently, we leverage our platform by reading each other's working paper and giving constructive feedback to each other. We believe this platform can help us keep up with the most recent research in the field, enhance our ability to read papers more critically, and also increase informal exchanges among PhD students.

We meet once every two weeks during the semester on a Monday for one hour, during which we share our thoughts on one paper (be it a published research paper or an internal working paper). Before the semester starts, I will circulate the agenda for the semester, including the list of papers to be discussed. Usually there are some free slots in the agenda so that we can be more flexible in the planning during the semester. To this end, I encourage and welcome group members to recommend papers which they think would be of interest for us.

If you are interested in joining us, please get in touched with Na (see email above). We look forward to meeting you.
